A message from our President.....

When next we meet on November 5, 2008, the tone of our meeting will be set by the events of the past several weeks: early voting and Election Day. At this most crucial time in our history, each of us stands equal in the voting booth. Maybe it's because I've been around for so long that I feel that this election is more crucial to the survival of our Constitutional government than any other election. Karl Marx wasn't around in 1791, so no one knew what a threat that his proposed form of government would be. Now we know. It presents a frightening specter.

Whether the voters elect McCain, or Obama the election is still undecided; we will face a Herculean task over the next four years. Whatever the final outcome, we will be challenged to meet a daunting task. Our economy is in dire straits, a war is yet to be won, and there will be a gargantuan political divide that could pull our country apart. The extreme partisanship of a Congress controlled by the Democratic Party, as it is bound to be, will hold us all hostages until they self-destruct. If you recall the principle of territorial imperative, a group or organization, which faces no threats or competition from the outside, turns on itself in the internal struggle to gain power and control of the treasury. So take heart. We'll have two years to take control of the House and four years to plan for wresting national power away from the most dangerous scenario the United States has ever faced.

Class warfare has been pushed upon us, and those of us who have chosen to be politically active will be challenged in our response to this issue, no matter who wins.

If McCain wins, the youth vote may feel disenfranchised. I remember in 1952, when I voted for the first time, I was enthralled with the eloquence of Adlai Stevenson. For the most part, my head was in my books, Chem lab, and Physics lab. So I was easily led down the liberal path, much like the youth of today, hungering for something to believe in and someone who seemed to carry the right banner, no matter how obtuse the logic of the rhetoric. When the election was over, I just went back to school and let the whole issue go.

If Obama wins with an exclusively liberal Congress, the battle to save our representative Republic will be joined. A Marxist President and a Socialist Congress will enact legislation and government programs that will drag us away from Constitutional government. Liberal Supreme Court Justices will be appointed if current ones resign. The fallacy of the Liberal logic is that the Constitution is a living document, rather than the rock on which our country is built. So Liberal Judges make law from the bench instead of interpreting the Constitution. Once installed, socialist programs are almost impossible to turn back. Look at Social Security and Medicare. Both are nearly broke, and no one has addressed how to save either.

This message is not meant to be a downer. Rather, I would hope that we would resolve to work harder and longer to bring about real government reform, and to not forget what the Republican Party stands for.

Beneath the tree are the presents the Harrison grandchildren received: a toy train and a wooden sled await Benjamin, Mary's rosy-cheeked doll sits on a tricycle, and nearby is Marthena's much wished for dollhouse. A three-foot-high Santa Claus completes the season's spectacle.

White House Ornament 2008

"We shall have an old-fashioned Christmas Tree for the grandchildren upstairs, and I shall be their Santa Claus myself."

PRESIDENT BENJAMIN HARRISON

The 2008 White House Christmas ornament honors the administration of President Benjamin Harrison (1833-1901), the twenty-third president of the United States. Serving one term from 1889 to 1893, Harrison was a centennial president inaugurated 100 years after George Washington. Inspired by the Harrison family's Victorian Christmas tree, this 24 karat gold finished ornament interprets the first recorded tree to decorate the White House. The tree, laden with
